

"The new solution is the result of two years of research. Machine Learning techniques integrated in the solution will make it easy to classify malware on its own, without any human involvement," a FireEye executive said. The Machine Learning model is based on data gathered from over 1.5 crore endpoint agents, attack analyses based on more than 10 lakh hours spent responding to attacks. "Hackers are constantly innovating and outmanoeuvring legacy, signature-based technology," John Laliberte, Senior Vice-President (Engineering), FireEye, said.

"Reducing the window of time from discovery to analysis and deployment of protection is critical to reducing risk in your enterprise," he added.

These new FireEye Endpoint security features are now available in the latest version of FireEye Endpoint Security (4.5).

The Director reserves the right to reject any or all the tenders.
